

On November 12, we will co-host the 37th reception for the International Fellows and their Spouses at the United State War College. This much-anticipated event continues to forge the relationship between the International Fellows Program and our Association. To enhance the understanding of this program, I will present a brief overview of the objectives and proposes of the International Fellows Program and to suggest ways for individual members who might wish to increase their engagement.

Since 1978, over one thousand international officers from over one hundred countries have graduated from the program. As related to me during a discussion with the IF director about ten years ago, the International Fellows are indeed students enrolled in the one-year academic program; however, their participation in the seminars take on special contributions in that they are expected to bring their nation's perspective into the classroom. According to a published statement, "the International Fellows Program adds another dimension to the U.S. Army War College which significantly broadens the academic environment for both students and faculty." Additionally, a stated objective of the program is "to establish mutual understanding and good working relationships between senior U.S. officers and senior officers of selected foreign countries."

What do the International Fellows get out of the program? They get to study, research and write under a renowned faculty at a highly respected graduate institution. Furthermore, they establish lasting relations with other international officers and their American counterparts. Lastly, they develop greater understandings of American society. As stated in the fourth objective, the program seeks "to improve the Fellows firsthand knowledge of the U.S. culture and institutions through study and travel."

The Fellows are assisted by a hardworking and dedicated staff; however, they are not alone. Scores of War College staff and retirees along with military and civilian volunteers serve as IF Sponsors. Several members of FPA also serve as civilian sponsors and in doing so, have established life-long relationships with officers from all continents. I have in the number of Fellows and subsequently, an increase in the demand for volunteers. So, do yourself a favor and contact the IF Program and consider becoming a sponsor. I am sure that you will find it as rewarding as I have.

Sincerely,

Dr. Clem E. Gilpin

The 37th Annual International Fellows Reception

United States Army War College

November 12, 2013
6:00 pm to 8:00 pm

LeTort View Community Club
Carlisle Barracks

Buffet-Refreshments Included
Parking Adjacent to LeTort View Community Club

Afghanistan – Albania – Algeria
Armenia – Australia – Austria
Bangladesh – Benin – Botswana
Brazil – Bulgaria – Burkina Faso
Canada – Chile – Columbia
Croatia – Czech Republic
Denmark – Egypt – El Salvador
Estonia – Ethiopia – Finland
France – Germany – Ghana – India
Indonesia – Iraq – Israel – Italy
Japan – Jordan – Kenya – Korea
Kuwait – Kyrgyzstan – Latvia
Lebanon – Lithuania – Macedonia
Malaysia – Mexico – Morocco
Nepal – Netherlands – New Zealand
Nigeria – Norway – Oman
Pakistan – Philippines – Poland
Romania – Saudi Arabia – Senegal
Serbia – Spain – Taiwan
Thailand – Turkey – Uganda
Ukraine – United Arab Emirates
United Kingdom – Vietnam
Zambia